

VAMPIRE CHICKS WITH CHAINSAWS

Synopsis
83 minutes

After signing the divorce papers and handing them over to his ex, Quinn Ash (ADAM ABRAM) jumps in his pickup and heads to the mountains with a pistol to end his life. While on the road, a shadow darts out of the trees and he slams into it. Quinn stops, steps out of the vehicle and cautiously approaches a body. It is a beautiful young woman (OLESYA RULIN). He checks for a pulse and can't find one. Lightning-quick, the woman rises and pins Quinn to the ground. She has a syringe in one hand, pulls the cap off the needle with her teeth and jams the needle into Quinn's neck, injecting him with a blue serum. She tells him, "They're coming. No matter what – don't let them have it!"

As she shoves him out of the road, a truck full of armed men, known as the "Outlanders" comes around the bend and attack Quinn and the girl. He fights them off and stabs one with his hunting knife. The Outlander bleeds green.

Hiding in the woods, Quinn is attacked by another of the young women – this one with a chainsaw (JAMIE ROSQUIST). Unbelievably strong, the girl captures Quinn and takes him to an underground lair where he is questioned and tortured by four of the beautiful women in skimpy clothing – all vampires. Either he is the luckiest man on earth or he's a dead duck.

Quinn discovers that one of the girls, Karel (JENNA LISONBEE), has a soft touch. But Quinn also knows that she could snap his neck at any moment. Karel, however, falls for Quinn, and, to his surprise, helps him escape. From her, Quinn learns that the myths about vampires are just that – only myths. None of the defenses work against them except the serum that has been injected into him.

Now he is hunted by the other vampires as well as the Outlanders – all bent on destroying him. They can't be reasoned with, and they will not stop until Quinn is dead. But then, there's Karel . . .
